I remember, for instance, an essay by Richard Jackson that focused on the French And after that, red wine was put into a cask located high in a house, so that it would run more quickly. But he was only embellishing an event witnessed by a chronicler, Giovanni Villani, who was contemporary with it. Similar damage was suffered by a few other cardinals, and this because, while the people were anxiously waiting, the rumor spread from time to time that one or another of them had been elected; then the crowd ran to his house and did its work.
