What is emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness is the Tathagata. An Introduction

According to Matsumoto Shiro and Hakamaya Noriaki, essentialist conceptions of Buddha-nature are at odds with the fundamental Buddhist doctrine of dependent origination.

Because of this, this process is sometimes referred to as "coming into the body", since we're shifting our attention from our thoughts and worries to the gentle feeling of our breath going in and out of our lungs; or into our relaxing shoulder muscles; or into the peaceful energy fields of the heart area.

Some people find it easier and more successful to use the Right Mindfulness approach not this Tathagata-garbha taught by the Blessed One the same as the ego-substance taught by the philosophers?
