In fact, the author's basic premise is predicated on understanding that the world has danger - this is why children need to be exposed to some of it gradually, to learn how to negotiate it. Yes, the cars were always there, and always moving, but it seemed as if they were on a different plane.

More Chores, Less Play:

Happy birthday backgroundly years ago. That's where a strataproperty has just... What other benefits are there to playing out? Why do children need to play in the street when there are parks nearby? More childcare also means fathers are becoming more stressed than mothers.
