But in the same way as I'm not properly repentant, so I'm not properly ashamed. Her husband is away for weeks at a time, and Effi, who is shunned by local nobles, finds but one friend. Their relationship can be seen as symbolizing the conflict between nature and culture. Geert von Innstetten, an ambitious nobleman and civil servant on the brink of middle age, makes an uncontroversial marriage to Effi von Briest, the year-old daughter of a former flame. He examines the proclivities of nature and how culture can stunt its development. Innstetten's return to Kessin in bright sunshine contrasting to his earlier life.
