Maybe it was a guy at work who needed to always be right, or a girl who complained about everything so people would feel sorry for her, or the friend who did crazy things to impress his friends and be cool. If a woman cannot find some other trait to admire a man for, it will undermine the respect she needs to consider him worthy as a partner. Here are some of the subtle but powerful factors that may help determine who we're attracted to.

Human biology and evolutionary psychology has some answers. Needs more nuanced. This suggests that physical appeal was not selected so strongly for men as for women in our evolutionary past 1. Even as scientific research has shed more light on the factors that contribute to our selection of a sexual mate, the biology of attraction is complex and not yet fully understood -- and it doesn't help that attraction is particularly difficult to replicate in a lab. Emotional, personal information exchange promotes powerful feelings of connection.

Needless to say, this strategy has a limited shelf life and torrid romances of shows that sexual Submitted by Anonymous on April 19, - 4: The photographs with the positive personality descriptions received the highest ratings for facial attractiveness, while the group with negative descriptions was ranked as less attractive than both the negative and the control group.
