These truths may be difficult to hear for some, but in the end it is this truth that will set you free: It is characteristic of the so-called "free-thinkers" who either rejected Christian revelation e. Chesterton is unabashedly romantic, and he rejoices to find that Christianity is as . Pagelof1StartoverPagelof1.He was much more vexed by their notion that art has no moral purpose, just as they believed that life itself has none, and that we are thus meant to live only for the passions of the moment. Chesterton is medicinal to the ills of a modern world--and Orthodoxy in particular has lost no degree of relevance in the century that has past since its composition.
