Included in Franzen, Jonathan. If in Time - Selected Poems. In a revised and expanded version, appears in Underworld, during a series of meetings in a New York restaurant, DeLillo provides more biographical information than he usually does, and comments on Mao's images, Catholicism, terrorism, and Salman Rushdie. In the same issue that contains "Shooting Bill Gray," DeLillo says that there's no direct correspondence between Gray and any particular author, and that hiding from the public "would probably be more trouble than it's worth." Edited by Baxter Hathaway.
